

Abrolhos Islands

The Abrolhos Archipelago, located 70 km from the coast in South Bahia, is the first National Marine Park. The Archipelago consists of small islands of volcanic origin, and is one of the best places in Brazil for diving. Its crystal clear waters provide excellent visibility, water temperature is comfortable and it houses great diversity of underwater fauna and flora, with exuberant coral formations and the shipwrecks.

In Abrolhos you will find numerous species of fish, shellfish, choral, sponges, etc. On dry land, sea birds, such as the white bellied booby, terns, frigates, jays and woodpecker. Besides the animals that inhabit the park, there are those that visit it seasonally for reproduction. This is the case of the sea turtles, some migratory birds and the humpback whale.

There isn't any lodging for the visitors in Marine National Park of Abrolhos. Its way to go is by the sea. And the best time to visit is Dec to Feb, in summer the water is very clear and warm. From Jul to Nov, is time of nesting of Jubarte whales.
